Additional comments:

- Lack or late arrival of educational materials like books and stationary to many schools have direct effect on the interest and motivation of the students and their parents. The great number of homeschools have problems with poor floor wear (carpets for the students), lack of drinking water storage etc. This would have less positive effect on the impact of the schools offering education.

- A common complain of the teacher was that their salary does not arrive at the proper time. This would definitely not encourage teachers to be fully motivated.

- Lack of a proper centres for students to come to also seems having effect on either too many students come to one place or they are devided into many small stations, that makes the work complicated in manner of monitoring and administration and quality.
- Having a battle line deviding the activity zone of the regional offices makes work of the education supervisors difficult. Ways should be searched to overcome this problem.

- The following schools in SRO were found by the surveyors as not running:

Kamarlot,	Jaghatoo, Wardak ;
Badam,	Narkh, Maidan, Wardak ;
Jangjoy,	Saidabad, Wardak.

- The following schools in ERO were not found:
- Ahmadzai school in Laghman is a nomadic school, and was migrated to upper land. No school responsible or teacher was found.

- Kegal in Nuristan is a winter school and the people had gone to mountains for animal husbandry.

B. SCA constructed School Buildings

General findings :

SCA has constructed more than 112 school buildings in all its three regions. Most of these buildings are housing educational activities supported by SCA itself, but a number of these buildings house educational activities run by other NGOs and /or the community itself. Through this survey the school buildings accessible were visited and basic information about them were enclosed into the survey data . Comparing to the list of 1966, there are 68 school buildings in the area under management of ERO and SRO , and the surveyors have visited 62 of them. Six school buildings are not visited by the surveyors. These have either been to the other side of the control line or, as another problem was encountered, there has been usage of different names as references for villages and districts where the buildings are located, thus causing difficulty in comparing the lists.

A few buildings are occupied by the local authorities, although sometimes they have provided other space for schooling as they like the solid building for their own use. One building has been damaged due to recent war in Parwan.

Conclusions on School Buildings

- The survey confirms that SCA built schools are used for educational purposes both by SCA itself but also by other organisations supporting education at rural areas. Only three buildings were reported to be occupied by local authorities as administration offices, where in some cases other place has been provided for the school instead. One building was destroyed due to armed conflict in parwan. Fourty one buildings are used by SCA itself for educational activities.
- The survey findings shows that buildings in different provinces varies in terms of use of construction material. Certain school buildings in Paktika and Ghazni seems to have structural weakness and low quality of construction and roofing.
- The survey findings show that there is a confusion as who is to be responsible for the building, the property and its maintenance once it is completed by SCA. A proper mechanism is required to insure the maintenance as well as sustainability of the establishment.
- For Girls education -- home education -- the construction of 'women halls' [or community halls] in villages could be considered, to house both the education activities for girls but it could also be used by other programmes working for women and children when it is not occupied.

Additional comments:

- School buildings in Wardak are in working condition and are occupied by educational programs. The school building in Qarabagh, Kabul was damaged due to fighting between Masud and Taliban last year, and it needs repair as it can not house the students there.

- Schools in Hazara area were not visited and , the surveyors were so advised by the regional offices for security reasons.

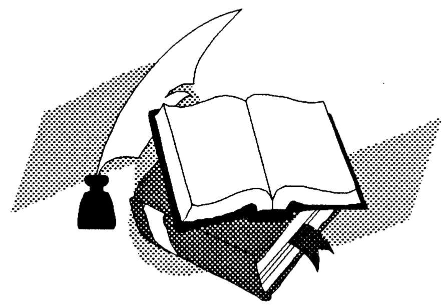

- In Kunar, due to a local conflict the team did not visit Asmar and Kamdish districts. They have not reported any serious problem with the buildings.

- Kapisa is not visited either. Qarabagh of Kabul was visited but the team did not go further north i.e. to Ghurband, and Bamiyan etc.

- The buildings in Logar and Paktya were basically OK. Only one guard looked after the school building which is practically not possible. The result is that window glasses are broken, roofs are not maintained . It is also not clear that who is the future responsible for maintenance of the school buildings.

- In Paktika and Ghazni, the surveyors report that most school buildings need much of maintenance as the roofs have leakage and walls in some schools have structural cracks. [see table on buildings]

A SURVEY ON SCA SUPPORTED GIRLS' EDUCATION AND SCA BUILT SCHOOL BUILDINGS

IN REGIONS UNDER SOUTHERN AND EASTERN SCA REGIONAL MANAGEMENT

A.W. Najimi
August 29 1997

INTRODUCTION

Swedish Committee for Afghanistan has been supporting elementary schools in Afghanistan since 1984. This activity grew stronger as time passed and experiences were learnt about how to incorporate the children education along with the strong involvement of children in the countryside family based economical activities, as these children do help in farming or take care of the animals at pasture. According to the Committee's Education Technical Support Unit (ETSU), SCA today supports more than 422 boys schools, 125 girls schools and 87 co-education [mixed schools] in form of primary schools and home-schools in Afghanistan. The operation is supervised through SCA's three major regional management based in Ghazni, Ningerhar and Taloqan.

The donor community giving funds to Afghanistan projects have at the latest years stressed usually on female projects, and demands to have women and girls being the major recipient and target groups, as well as to have stronger involvement of women in the rehabilitation projects in Afghanistan. Women involvement in work and lawful activities has not been that of a problem in the urban areas of the country. Other times such demand of the donor group has been difficult to live up to in the rural country side, especially if the project officers involved in a 'project design' and its implementation would have little or no experience about the rural communities in Afghanistan, the social set-up, the micro culture and the traditional pattern of community participation, women's involvement in a rural family's economy as well as the possibilities available at hand. One should also say that it has been the educated women themselves that have not done much for their country sisters in need of assistance.

With the arrival of Taliban to power female education in formal schools were temporarily stopped. One of the reasons, among others, was that the countryside Afghans now in power are not used to see their women in activities exposed to strangers, a value based on their Islamic belief and culture. The other major reasons have been the security issue and lack of national funds to pay for the schools and teachers salary. However, programs supported by the community itself and/or by some NGOs, and in line with the local cultural understanding, have maintained its presence.

SCA, as one of the organisations which reflect devotion to assistance to the Afghan people and has demonstrated a strong will for sustainability of the projects they undertake, supports many girl schools in the country but also many homeschools where children go to the home of a female teacher and get lessons. In this way the participation of women and girls in education has been much normal, seen from the traditional point of view, and well accepted culturally.

In order to study the Status Que of the Girls education supported by SCA in rural Afghanistan, a 'sample survey' was made by an independent consultant, what this report is about.

1.2 The survey

As it is called a 'sample survey', this survey was conducted in areas under management of SCA's southern regional office (SRO) and eastern regional office (ERO) but in areas under the control of Taliban. The surveyors could not visit areas to the other side of the battle line (conflict line between Taliban and their opponents). Access to those areas was difficult as during the survey period the conflict-line was not relaxed.

There were six surveyors sent to the field, each travelling by a motorbike provided to them by the regional offices. They visited SCA schools in one or two provinces each. While two people collected data in provinces related to ERO, four people collected data in provinces related to SRO. The surveyors were a mixed team of university students, for eastern region, and former IRC teacher trainers for the southern region. The surveyors were quite familiar with districts they were collecting data from.

A survey form was designed in collaboration with the ETSU in Peshawar, based on which information on girl schools, mixed schools and homeschools were recorded. Data on the girl students were collected only..

The field work took about six weeks from early June to the middle of July 1997. As the latest field reports for 1997 had not reached SCA office in before the surveyors should depart to the field work, lists of schools based on reports of 1996 were the major guide for the surveyors to follow. Any new list for schools established in 1997 was supposed to be provided by the field offices.

The mid-term report 1997 by the regional offices (RO), is also studied and reference is made to it for comparing data..

Comparing to the list of 1996, about 44 sites (13 belonging to ERO, 31 belonging to SRO) to the other side of the line were not visited. During 1997, twenty one more sites have been established. Therefore comparing to the lists of 1997 about 60 sites (13 at ERO and 47 at SRO) are not surveyed. See table below. A total of 166 schools sites were visited, among them about 100 female schools, having female education in form of primary and homeschool, were surveyed.

Also, general information was collected about the SCA built school buildings in the area surveyed Having 68 school buildings constructed by SCA, the survey team visited 62 of them while 6 buildings were in areas close to battle line and therefor out of reach for security reasons.

A. Girls Education

A.1. General Findings:

As mentioned earlier, the surveyors could not visit areas on the other side of the battle line (conflict line between Taliban and their opponents). Access to those areas was difficult as during the survey period the conflict-line was not relaxed.

SCA classification of Girls schools:

G = Girl school	M = Mixed school	H = Home school

While being descouraged by the battle lines, it was encouraging to obseve that there were girls' education going on in many of the provinces surveyed. Through this survey 100 of girl Schools are visited and surveyed , where about 7834 girls were registered .

Despite the talks about Taliban not allowing girls education, in many areas under their control, girls have access to education and people are interested to let their daughters seek knowledge through the available educational centres and homeschools..

Although in Logar province girl schools were altered to boy schools, still there is one girl school and 40 girl students.

People's attitude towards girls education was found encouraging. Certain schools need to establish more classes as they have received more students recently (due to seasonal migration of refugees to their home villages probably, or coming from the cities). The greater dencity of students is noticed in the three elementary classes.

- There are about 7834 girls registered in the surveyed schools. Where the number of students found present by the surveyors were 6879 (88% of the registered), having permanent absentee of 488 (6%), the routine attendance makes a figure of 7341 students (94% of the registered number). The regional office reports shows a figure of 7146 for the registered students [or usual attendance] in the same [surveyed] schools (3% less than the surveyed register). In some schools one could find more students than original plan. The increase is due to either seasonal or permanent return of the villagers having lived in Pakistan as refugees.

Female teachers:

Having many families earlier living in Kabul and now settled in the provinces, today it is easier than before to find educated women in some villages and who can conduct a school. The survey shows that there are about 170 female teachers in the SCA supported girl schools surveyed., making a ration of 46 girls student to a female teacher. The RO reports having 302 female teachers in all SRO and ERO regions which makes a ration of 44 girl students per female teacher. [see table A.5]

Conclusion on Girl Schools

Through the survey and studying the reports 1997 one would get the following figures about the girl students in SCA supported schools under management of SRO and ERO.

- Based on the ' Sample Survey' data and comparing it with the RO reported data the figures are some how close enough . The result shows that there should be around 13'339 female students(a stipulated figure from survey and RO report*)* in the 154 girl schools, mix schools and home-schools SCA is supporting. [69 at ERO and 85 at SRO]. RO reports a total of 13254 girls. The small increase of 195 students in survey data is because of the new students returning to their home villages. in both cases , the girl students make 13% of the total students (102'718 of RO report).

- As mentioned above, the survey confirms existence of female education in the area under control of Taliban, given the fact that both religious and cultural values as well as basic rural mentality be respected by all involved. This finding of 13% Girls is ofcourse 7% lower than the target of 20% planned for 1997.

- To extend the girl schools in future, there could be a survey undertaken by the ROs to collect data on educated (letterate) women in villages who could teach children of that village.

- The survey findings also trigger the desire to review the 'administrative practice' and logistic routines in supplying books and equipment as well as the salaries to teachers -- all in attempt to upgrade the moral of the teachers and encourage the communities to participate and be involved as the counter part in education of their children.
